

Working School CSR text

Working School is a humanitarian aid organization, that was started August 1. 2003 with the purpose of helping through teaching and educating poor and orphaned children in The Third World.

The latest brain research shows that there is no connection between IQ and population groups or origin. Research shows that it depends on the stimulant that the children get in their years at school, that release the IQ, and we are very happy, that this is exactly what we are doing, thereby making a difference.

Working School has since 2008 in close cooperation with Re-cycled to The South and The Computer Group Holbaek sent re-cycled IT equipment and school furniture to schools in Laos, Cambodia and Myanmar.

Furthermore the aim has now been widened to also cover teaching and education of the teachers of the schools, the children's parents and people living in the villages. That way the IT equipment is being more widely used and the level of knowledge in the small local communities. Robust societies is a matter of seeing a future with possibilities and with good living ahead.

All members of Working School and volunteers are working without pay and there are no administration overheads.
